

THE TRIBUNE.

Friday, - November 16, 1900.

In Real Life.

"By the way," said the man who had stopped at a farmhouse to water his horse, "15 years ago a poor boy came this way and you took him in."

"Yes?" queried the farmer, somewhat surprised, relates London Answer.

"You were kind to him" went on the stranger, "you fed him, gave him words of encouragement and an old suit of clothes, put five shillings in his pocket and sent him on his way rejoicing. He told you at the time that he never would forget your kindness. Am I right?"

"I believe you are," replied the farmer.

"He said that if he prospered he would see that you never had occasion to regret your kindness to a poor, struggling lad."

"Land's sakes!" exclaimed the farmer's wife, excitedly, "it sounds almost like a fairy tale, don't it?"

"Well," continued the stranger, "he told me to tell you that he is still poor."

And as he drove away the farmer went out and kicked the pump viciously, while his wife threw a rolling pin at the chickens.—Ex.

The Football Girl.

New York Press

She does not play the game, her football costumes being marvels of beauty and artfulness for such encounters; she encourages it. She goeth forth to the field armed with the flag of the university or the heroes she has subjugated in the gender lists the blazon of "this" college glowing on her breast in the form of a bunch of crimson, crimson, crimson, crimson, thomsons or fragrant violets. Her conception of the game is only equaled in its strangeness by the wildness of her use of the organ of the gridiron and her intensity of interest. And even these are nothing to her ineffable loveliness and grace.

On the covered stand, in the presence of the eleven heroes (her side) and the eleven devils (the rival team) she is a whirlwind of emotions visibly expressed. She wagers untold millions in her excitement, she bursts her gloves in wild applause and applies the same endearing adjectives to a mud-stained nose-mashed quartet back as she would to Jesus in "Faust."

As to her manner and method of wigwanging her flag—to see her would wear a pair of padded trousers. They will be a relief as he bounces down the capital steps with the compliments of a Cut gross composed of men who respect an honest ballot.—G. D.

Now and again—so run her cell stars in their courses—her colleague is defeated, and the chroniclers of the game for the public prints are compelled, to the exasperation of editors demanding truth, to narrate the hideous defeat in all its salient points. It is then she sullets in anguish; it is then she rises in her wrath from the breakfast paper and declares she will write a letter to the editor objecting to his luminary's report of the game. On the whole, she humorously and lightly reproduces with a touch of modern costume and beauty the effect of the Romeo mutation hanging over the arena and crying to the gladitor, "Poles vice!"

Miss Fannie McVeigh has brought suit against the City of Louisville for $10,000 alleged damages for having fallen on a defective sidewalk on Sept. 8, during a political rally. We know nothing as to the merits of Miss McVeigh's claim, but there is one thing certain, there are many sidewalks in other towns that disgrace any community and it is a wonder more people are not injured. A half hour's work on some of the sidewalks in Vandalia might avert a big damage suit.—Vandalia Leader.
